

$400,000,000 Four Hundred Millions of Dollars to build the Panama Canal—

"The whole thing is stupendous, prodigious, overwhelming."

The Panama Number (July)

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE

will tell the story of the completed canal, how it will be operated, its uses and value to the United States and the world. This will be a number to preserve—an inspiring record for the future—when the canal is opened.

Panama's Bridge of Water

How it was built, how it will be operated, is told by JOSEPH BUCKLIN BISHOP.

What the Canal will Accomplish

By EMORY R. JOHNSON. Its value to commerce, saving in time to the ships of the world.

The Defence of the Canal

By former Secretary of War HENRY L. STIMSON. Its fortifications and strategic value in the event of war.

"The Panama Pacific"

International Exposition of 1915, by ELMER GREY. How it will look, the buildings, the beautiful courts and water-gates, the rich color scheme.

Wonderful Pictures in Color

In the tropic sunlight colors are accentuated and made wonderfully vivid. The Panama Number will have a series of photographs made directly from nature in the natural colors. They represent the very last and most skilled effects in color photography and reveal the scenes of the canal with all the realism and convincing truth of a personal visit.

The number will be a very notable one also for its other contents. The two greatest novels of the year

Mrs. Wharton's The Custom of the Country

John Galsworthy's The Dark Flower

(The Love Life of a Man) are continued and both reach situations of absorbing interest.

Mary R. S. Andrews, author of "The Perfect Tribulation," contributes one of her delightful stories about college life, "Amici"—full of humor and sentiment.

H. G. Dwight writes of "Mohammedan Holidays," scenes in Constantinople.

Ernest Peixotto describes his journey across Titicaca, with a glimpse of Bolivia. Lake Titicaca lies over 12,000 feet above the sea.

SPECIAL: A reprint of the earlier chapters of Mrs. Wharton's story will be sent free to any one upon request.

Millionaires a Drug in the Social Market

So Says a Social Promoter

LISTEN!

"But the suggested furtherance of the social ambitions of the house of Blinn came just at a time when millionaires and multimillionaires began to be a drug in the market. It was practically impossible then to break into Society with money alone—and absolutely impossible to break in without it. Money was getting too common, and you could not buy your way into Society with it. The jaded appetites of the elect could not be tempted by mere dinners, as one was very much like the other, and there were plenty of people with fat purses eager to entertain. It was a hard task to persuade any one to go to their entertainments."

Oh, it's an illuminating little series of confessions that he is writing for our Sunday Magazine! The second installment appears next Sunday, and is even more interesting than the first, for he goes into details. "LAUNCHING THE BLINNS"—for a consideration, of course—is so intimately true, all but the names, that one cannot disbelieve it.

HINTS TO WOMAN READERS

PRACTICAL LESSONS FOR THE HOME DRESSMAKER

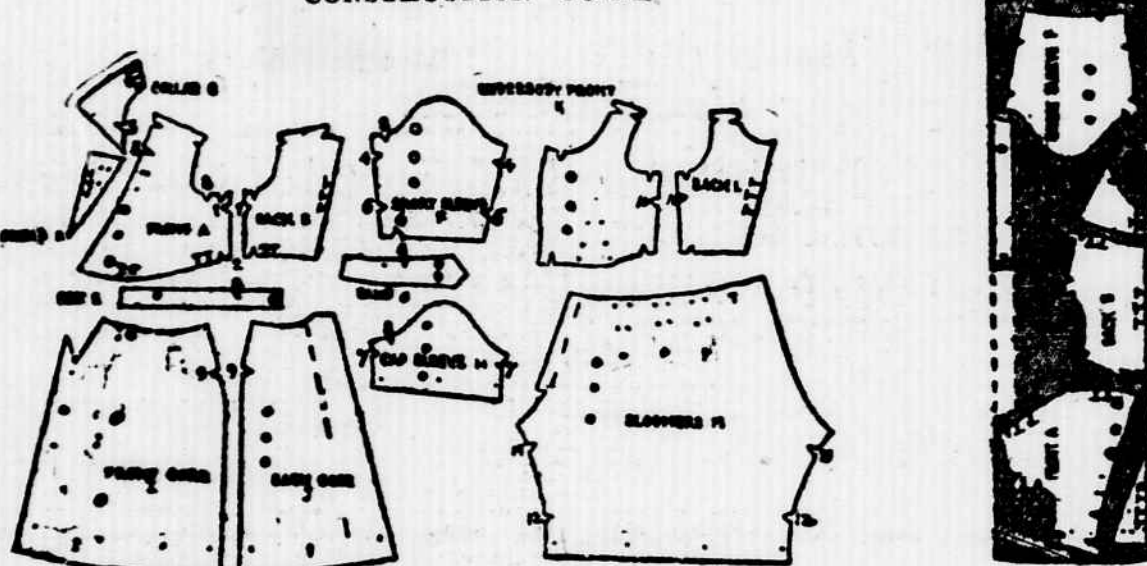

BLACK TAFFETA BATHING SUIT.

A smart model that can be made without much trouble or expense for the woman who pays particular attention to her "beach frocks." It is trimmed with collar and belt of white pique.

Patented April 30, 1907

CONSTRUCTION GUIDE

The truly fashionable woman is as faultless in her bathing costume as in her street dress. There are so many attractive designs in "beach toilets," as the fashionable bathing suit is called, that it is not necessary to resort to exaggerated effects unless one is inclined toward the spectacular.

Taffeta is elegant without being necessarily expensive. It is recommended for this bathing suit. All silk materials wear out quickly when they come into frequent contact with salt water, so that it is an extravagance to get costly taffeta for the suit. Bias bands of its own material may be used for the trimming. The collar and belt may be detachable, white pique being very good for the purpose.

The cost of making up this design for average size is:

3 1/2 yards taffeta at $1.00 per yard.....$3.75
1 yard pique at 50c per yard......50

The suit consists of a comfortable but well fitting waist, four-piece skirt and dart-fitted bloomers attached to an underbody.

There are thirteen pieces in the pattern, viz.: For waist—front (A), back (B), collar (C), shield (D), belt (E), short sleeve (F), band (G), cap sleeve (H). For skirt—front gore (I), back gore (J), underbody front (K), underbody back (L), bloomers (M).

In cutting, with the exception of the belt, which is placed on a crosswise fold, place pieces with edge marked "TT" perforations on a lengthwise fold, and remaining pieces with line of large "O" perforations on a lengthwise thread of material. Cut off the front edge of left front gore on double "oo" perforations.

It is better to make the waist first. Begin by closing underarm seam, as notched, after which close the shoulder seam. Gather lower edge of front and back between double "TT" perforations. Sew belt to lower edge, center even (large "O" perforations indicate center-front), notch at underarm seam. Sew collar to neck edge as notched. Adjust shield to position bringing corresponding small "oo" perforations in shield and in front together.

To make the cap sleeve, which is generally preferred to the short sleeve, close the seam as notched. Turn the hem on small "oo" perforations, and this is better if hemmed by hand, unless the machine stitch is slightly lengthened.

Now for the skirt. Join gores as notched. Turn hems at front and lower edges on small "oo" perforations. Center-front indicated by large "O" perforations. Lap right front gore on left.

The next thing to do is to take a walk. It may seem to you that it would be better to sit still and rest them, but this is not so effective; walking relieves the strain on the muscles that have been overtaxed, and restores a normal circulation.

Simple care of this kind will do wonders for you if persisted in regularly.

Scents From the Garden.

This is the time to make potpourri—that is to say, if you live where there are roses. Early each morning go into the garden and gather the flowers, full blown, covered with dew and just ready to begin to fall. Pull the leaves apart and spread them on a towel or sheet or a big table in an attic or unused room where they can be left undisturbed until they are dry. Add more roses from day to day until you have all you want. Turn them, if the weather is damp, so that they will not mildew and keep the air about them fresh and circulating. When they are dry put them in a wide mouthed fruit jar—the pint size is easiest to handle—in layers half an inch thick, with salt sprinkled between. Stir them each morning for ten or twelve days and then begin to add spices and oils.

The kinds of spices and oils added are optional. A tried recipe calls for a quarter of an ounce of ground cloves, the same amount of both allspice and cinnamon, an eighth of an ounce of mace and the same amount of dried lavender flowers. The lavender if its odor is not found agreeable. Add also a quarter of a nutmeg, grated. Now begin to fill the rose jar, putting first a layer of dried and salted rose leaves, then a sprinkling of spices, then a few drops of oil—oil of orange flower, rose, bitter almond or any other oil will do—and so on until the jar is full. When it is full pour half an ounce of cologne over it to bring its parts into harmony.

Powder can be scented with fresh flowers. Mix the powder with rice powder and orris root make a good combination—and put it in a bowl. Thrust fresh blossoms, highly scented, into the powder, cover the bowl with a plate, put more blossoms in every day and at the end of a week remove the blossoms, straining the powder through a wire sieve or a piece of coarse cheesecloth to do so. Roses, violets, clove pinks, tuberose or any other strongly scented flowers can be used to scent powder.

Several dried leaves can be used for sachet and will be found to have a more interesting odor than the powdered sachet bought in the shops. Lemon verbena leaves can be used for this purpose and so can rose geranium leaves. The leaves should be picked when fresh and green and immediately placed in linen sheets, bureau drawers, handkerchief or glove box or wherever the scent is wanted.

Any one who likes the scent of lavender will enjoy having a lavender bush growing in the garden. The flowers should be picked blooming and laid away to dry.

The New Kind of Glove.

It is not possible to go out in the afternoon wearing a frock with a new kind of short sleeve and not wear the long gloves which the manufacturers have invented to meet the occasion. These are thirty-five buttons in length, and even longer, and they are wrinkled from wrist to shoulder and cover all the arm. The effect is not pretty unless one wears a white or light gown, in which case the long expanse of white kid on the arm is not a decided contrast; but when one wears a gown of any ordinary color, and especially of black, the white or light sleeve is too conspicuous for beauty.

Yet what is one going to do if one insists upon wearing this new type sleeve? The public should be thankful that there has been a glove immediately made to wear with it or we should no doubt see women going around with their bare arms swinging free of their frocks, like prizefighters.

Soft silks of all kinds are generally accepted for street costumes. These materials are made up on the strict, severe lines of the tailored suit, the skirts being arranged to give grace to the wearer.

FASHIONABLE GIRDLE OF STRIPED SILK

Last February there were ultra-fashionable gowns of blue serge and black satin made with wide striped sashes that dropped, gypsy fashion, from the right hip toward the left knee and tied there with fringed ends. Only a slender woman could wear such an adornment, and even she wore it with a short coat to part way hide it. However, fashion did not smile even upon this ultra exclusive use of it for long; very soon there were comments against it at a conspicuous fashion show and women who thought they would like to take it up soon made up their minds that it was better to use striped ribbon around the waist if they were going to use it, and not around the hips.

This attitude did not put out of fashion the girdles of striped Roman ribbon or those of Scotch plaid which were crushed for four inches around the waist line directly under the loose blouse that hung partly over them. This fashion still remains, but there is more fondness shown toward the large loose girdles in solid colors. These are universal. They are added to one piece frocks of linen, rayon, shantung and satin which the middie-aged woman brings into fashion as a one-piece street frock. The art in these girdles lies in making them appear as though they scarcely touched the figure, but were carelessly thrown around the waist and were caught somewhere in the back or at the side in an indifferent manner.

This is not an easy task, especially in these days of cut bodices and wide waist measurements. The inclination is to draw the wide belt snugly into the figure and try to make yourself as unlike a barrel as possible. The slim girl, we say, can toss her sash about her in this oriental fashion, but the woman of over 150 pounds looks worse when she tries to do it; yet the truth is that unless a woman do it in this way she had better avoid wearing it.

FASHIONS AND FADS.

There is still a decided preference for the small, the dainty, the delicate. Linen eponge suits have dangling ball buttons of pearl. The basque of chiffon appears on many afternoon gowns. Heavy crocheted buttons are seen on the new linen skirts. Simple printed velvets have girdles of vivid embossed velvet. The very low-cut bodice is worn by Parisiennes in the daytime. The low waist line and gay sash are seen even on bathing suits.
